Did you know...???

Humans have been whitening fabrics for centuries. Ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans bleached materials. As early as 300 B.C., soda ash, prepared from burned seaweed, was used to clean and whiten cloth. During the Middle Ages, the Dutch perfected the bleaching of fabrics in a process called crofting, whereby fabrics were spread out in large fields for maximum sunlight exposure. In 1785, the French scientist Claude Berthollet found that chlorine was an excellent whitening agent in fabrics.
