Invented by...

On August 22, 1865, William Sheppard of New York was granted patent number 49,561 for his "Improved Liquid Soap." Sheppard discovered that when a large amount of hartshorn and a small amount of conventional soap were mixed, a soap with the consistency of molasses would result.

FYI

According to a recent study at the University of Arizona, bulk soap dispensers are at risk for soap contamination due to their refilling style. These dispensers use a reusable container that is refilled by hand, increasing the potential for soap contamination. To ensure the health and safety of washroom patrons, be sure to follow the manufacturer's cleaning and sanitizing instructions to thoroughly wash the reusable container between each refill. It is also important to train employees in proper refill procedures. Sealed bag-in-box refills are an alternative to bulk dispensing systems. These refills are sealed during the manufacturing process and are discarded when empty, helping to prevent the potential for contamination.
