History of...

In 2004, Richard Axel and Linda Buck won the Nobel Prize for their research on how the nose smells and all the smells it smells. Axel and Buck clarified the intricate biological pathway from the nose to the brain that lets people perceive and recognize smells. A whiff of an odor brings a mix of different molecules into the nose, where each molecule activates several odor receptors. This pattern of activation is interpreted by the brain, letting people recognize and form memories of about 10,000 different odors, the Nobel Assembly said.

Fun fact...

Women have a keener sense of smell than men do. On average, we are able to recognize approximately 10,000 different odors. Our sense of smell is so powerful that when you smell even the most potent odors, you are actually sampling around 0.000,000,000,002 (that's just a two-trillionth) of a gram of scent.
